[REDACTED]

We all know that black communities and Natives have always been plagued by an array of issues that we have to deal on a daily basis. Watching America's reaction to racism is very telling. Last year, police brutality and racism have made it to the forefront. Hundreds of unarmed black men and women died at the hands of police officers.

We are tired to feel neglected and ignored. We all have had enough. And now we need to come together, be honest and get the government's attention.

You are all invited to join [REDACTED]

We do not expect you to solve generations of inequality and oppression overnight. We do, however, expect you to come and to address the issues and put forward a plan to make change.
